Former President Bill Clinton walks his daughter, Chelsea, down the aisle at her wedding Saturday in Rhinebeck, N.Y. REUTERS PHOTOS

America's royal wedding

Epic security surrounds ceremony uniting Chelsea Clinton, longtime beau

Chelsea Clinton and Marc Mezvinsky have known each other since they were teenagers.

Reuters

Bill and Hillary Clinton's daughter married her longtime boyfriend Saturday in the picturesque New York village of Rhinebeck in what has been dubbed America's royal wedding.

Chelsea Clinton—the only child of the former U.S. president and the U.S. secretary of state—wed Marc Mezvinsky at Astor Courts, a historic 50-acre estate on the Hudson River, about 100 miles north of New York City.

“Today, we watched with great pride and overwhelming emotion as Chelsea and Marc wed in a beautiful ceremony at Astor Courts, surrounded by family and their close friends,” Bill and Hillary Clinton said in a statement.

“We could not have asked for a more perfect day to celebrate the beginning of their life together, and we are so happy to welcome Marc into our family,” the statement said.

“On behalf of the newlyweds, we want to give special thanks to the people of Rhinebeck for welcoming us and to everyone for their well-wishes on this special day.”

The statement, sent just after 7:30 p.m., did not indicate exactly when the nuptials took place.

Photos e-mailed to Reuters by Clinton aides showed the bride and groom walking down a broad outdoor aisle between rows of guests. Chelsea wore a strapless white gown with a fitted bodice and full skirt with platinum-colored beading at the waist and a long white veil.

The groom wore a simple black tuxedo going down the aisle and in a photo with the Clinton family, and a white prayer shawl and yarmulke in separate photos with Chelsea under a flowering tree and amid wedding guests.

The photos were in sun and shade, with lighting suggesting they were taken in the late afternoon.

In the one photo in which she appeared, Hillary Clinton wore a magenta gown. Bill Clinton wore a simple black tux with a white boutonniere in his lapel.

OTHER DETAILS

Secret guest list

Apart from the parents of the bride, the only other high profile guests seen in Rhinebeck were Bill Clinton's former secretary of state, Madeleine Albright, actors Ted Danson and Mary Steenburgen and fashion designer Vera Wang. Also spotted was real estate scion and movie producer billionaire Steve Bing.

They go way back

Chelsea Clinton, 30, and Marc Mezvinsky, 32, have known each other since they were teenagers. He is an investment banker whose parents, Marjorie Margolies-Mezvinsky and Edward Mezvinsky, once were Democratic U.S. House of Representatives members.

How much?

Signs and pictures congratulating the newlyweds hung in many shop windows in Rhinebeck, N.Y., which was swarmed by media around the world for an event that experts estimate to have cost between $3 million and $5 million.

Tight security

Airspace above Rhinebeck was closed for 12 hours from 3 p.m. Saturday for the wedding, and media were kept well away from the entrance to Astor Courts. Security in the area was comparable to measures surrounding state visits.

Notable

The guest list was reported to be between 400 and 500, but did not include President Obama.

Quotable

“Hillary and Bill properly want to keep this as a thing for Chelsea and her soon-to-be husband. It would be tough enough to have one president at a wedding. You don't want two presidents.”

—President Obama (above), speaking on “The View” last week

You wouldn't like me when I sweat

I'll admit that I have an ulterior motive in being an outspoken proponent of government action to address global warming. No, I have no investments in a solar energy company ("We can't take your childhood basketball card collection as an 'investment,'" a company official told me.)

I just sweat a lot.

What's "a lot"? It's like what that Supreme Court justice said about pornography—you know it when you see it.

During normal summers, I have to script my entire day around avoiding harsh sunshine, peak temperatures and non-air-conditioned spaces. This summer, however, I'm getting a glimpse of the future: 2010 is set to be the hottest year on record, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. This summer has given us record-breaking temperatures all over the world, including the hottest temperature ever recorded on the Asian continent. The Pakistani Meteorological Department registered 128.3 degrees Fahrenheit in the town of Mohenjo-daro.

Luckily, I'm not book touring in Mohenjo-daro, but I did go to Maine, where it was freakishly hot by Maine standards, ayuh. I found myself walking through the Bowdoin campus on the way to my reading, desperately trying to not let my shirt touch the Niagara Falls of perspiration descending from my back to my ass. I spent 10 minutes in the bathroom mopping up the cataclysmic results of a five-minute walk.

This was the week Harry Reid announced the death of significant climate and energy legislation in that collection of gutless, anti-scientific, provincially minded swine we call the Senate. But the anger stimulated by this would only lead me to sweat more.

Now I'm in Boston where I'm staying with a friend of a friend in the loft of an apartment where—and I don't think I'm exaggerating when I say this—it must be 37,000 Kelvin. I go downstairs to use the bathroom and walk by these strangers I'm staying with looking like I've just finished a 5K.

But I'm not completely self-serving in my stance against planet-cooking greenhouse gases and those who profit from them. I'm also trying to help my friend Scott, who sweats even more than I do.

With just a slight increase above room temperature, Scott can go from a normal guy with normal hair to a slick-backed Bugsy Siegel-style gangster in about two minutes. Scott sweats so much that his back-to-ass area has its own ocean jet stream.

Heavy sweaters like us will not be able to cope with the coming onslaught of even more brutally hot weather. Our genes will be weeded out and lost to natural selection as women the world over refuse to mate with us because we've been forced to carry Sham-Wows wherever we go.

Abnormal sweaters must unite against global warming.

Designers putting plastics into fashion to keep them out of landfills

By Erin Sarris | FOR REDEYE

Those plastic bottles you faithfully haul to the alley every week might eventually stage a comeback in your closet.

Eco-chic fashion items such as shoes, bags, shirts and accessories have taken center stage this summer with clothing made from recycled plastic bottles that ordinarily would be languishing in landfills. Call it the newest trend in eco-fashion.

Just look at the World Cup. Players on Nike-sponsored teams wore uniforms spun from polyester fabric made out of recycled plastic bottles, with the shoe giant estimating that each jersey reused about eight bottles. In Chicago, dozens of eco-boutiques are stocking their shelves with repurposed clothing and lifestyle items ranging from home decor to camping accessories, all created with post-consumer plastic bottles. Meanwhile, at Whole Foods, Trader Joe's and other retailers that lean on green marketing, many shoppers carry reusable bags that proudly declare "I used to be a plastic bottle" or some variation thereof.

"Recycling plastic bottles into clothing is not a fad; these fabrics are here to stay," said Jonathan Shaun, co-founder of Connect Chicago, an eco-boutique with a focus on sustainable fashion that has shops in Wicker Park and Lincoln Park. "You start adding the numbers up of how long it takes for one plastic bottle to decompose—700 years by some estimates—and you feel pretty good about the fact that you're taking useless junk and making it into something wearable."

How does it work? Bottles are picked up as large bales of plastic from recycling plants, then rinsed, purified and chopped down into small pieces. These shredded bits of plastic are melted and spun into long strands that are woven to create a soft, durable fabric. According to statistics cited by the Environmental Protection Agency, the textile recycling industry keeps about 2.5 billion pounds of post-consumer textile waste out of the environment.

Though many fashion fads come and go, the material made from recycled plastic bottles—Polyethylene Terephthalate, known as PET—can be revived again and again to create a completely new product.

When it comes to sustainable fashion, images of scratchy, burlap motifs no longer apply. Here are several eco-chic options that help you look out for the planet and look good while you do it.

Haberdasher Neck Tie

$68 at Connect Chicago—
1330 N Milwaukee Ave.

» Oh, snap. The back of this classic snap-down necktie, which is made from a wool/PET fabric blend using plastic bottles, has a patent-pending tie-down feature that uses dress shirt buttons to hold itself in place during a windy commute.

Features: Button snap. Comes in black or charcoal. Made from a wool/PET fabric blend with odor resistant properties and water repellency. Made in the USA.

Sustainable scoop: "This tie is a new eco-friendly take on a very old but classic piece," Connect co-founder Jonathan Shaun said. "And trust me when I say that flailing ties are a problem for men who ride their bikes to work."

2-Liter Soda Bottle Bracelet

$11 at etsy.com/shop/ArtworkbyKD

» This translucent green bracelet turns last night's leftovers into the perfect accompaniment for tonight's little black dress. It's made with thinly cut circles sliced from a green 2-liter soda bottle and strung together with wire.

Features: Bracelet comes in transparent green color with a lobster clasp and is 8 inches long. Each circular disc is 1.25 inches in diameter.

Sustainable scoop: "This bracelet stands for everything green," said artist and sustainable jewelry designer Kathy DellaValle, who operates her Etsy Web shop out of Northern Pennsylvania but says she has sold several copies of this bracelet in Chicago. She can make about two or three bracelets from a single 2-liter bottle; the item is a best-seller in her shop.

Simple 'Flippee' Sandal $29.95 at Nordstrom—55 E. Grand Ave. Available for order at the store or at nordstrom.com » Reducing your environmental footprint—har, har—is a snap with these plastic bottles-turned-sandals, which have straps made of PET webbing crafted from recycled soda containers. The foot-form inserts are made from recycled paper, and the sandal's rubber soles are biodegradable thanks to an additive that helps speed up decomposition.

Features: Available in black or brown, textured soles for comfort, vegan, biodegradable packaging; also available in women's styles.

Sustainable scoop: These sandals do more than make use of old plastic bottles: The 100 percent recycled rubber soles save valuable landfill space and help turn once-discarded rubber into something fashionable and functional.

Nau Lightbeam Jacket With Stripe

$175 at Connect Chicago—1330 N. Milwaukee Ave.

» This lightweight button-up jacket is made from 100 percent PET. Once you've given it a long life of wear, the jacket can be returned to the place of purchase to be recycled into polyester fibers for a second—or third or fourth—time around.

Features: Durable, breathable fabric with wind and water resistance, zip-up hood, adjustable drawstring cuffs and hood, comes in gray or green. Also available in women's styles.

Sustainable scoop: "In Chicago's unpredictable weather, items like these are a necessity because they're beautiful, functional and environmentally friendly," Shaun said. The sustainable retailer with locations in Wicker Park and Lincoln Park carries the Nau Lightbeam jacket and other items made from post-consumer waste. The boutique will deliver orders within city limits by cyclist instead of ground shipping. Talk about conscious capitalism.

The North Face Women's Denali Jacket

$165 at Moosejaw—1445 W. Webster Ave. or online at moosejaw.com

» The same plastic water bottles that keep you cool in the summer can help warm you up during the cold winter months. This Northface fleece—a fashion staple in the Windy City—is made using recycled water bottles and other post-consumer materials.

Features: Available in 12 colors, with one chest pocket and two hand pockets, reinforced shoulders and elbows. Available in men's, women's and children's styles.

Sustainable scoop: "[This fleece] is perfect for the Midwest. Buyers can get what they want and feel like they're leaving less of a footprint doing so," said Moosejaw marketing representative Sarah Rewold. She said the use of recycled materials in clothing seems to be resonating in Chicago and elsewhere, especially among outdoorsy companies such as the North Face and Patagonia, which offer a variety of fleeces using recycled materials that are available at the Lincoln Park boutique.

MAJOR SCORE

$5.7M IN COCAINE, MARIJUANA SEIZED FROM MAN

Chicago Tribune

Chicago police announced Sunday that the department has seized about $5.7 million of cocaine and marijuana from a Southwest Side man whom authorities say likely is connected to drug trafficking organizations in Mexico.

Francisco Gonzalez-Nieto, 22, of the 7700 block of South Kilbourn Avenue, was arrested Friday at his home. Police found more than $87,000 in cash and more than 4,000 grams of cocaine and about 1,900 pounds of marijuana packaged in cardboard boxes stacked in a bedroom, said Nick Roti, chief of the organized crime division.

Gonzalez-Nieto was being held at the Cook County Jail on a $25,000 cash bond.

Led by a tip, police were investigating Gonzalez-Nieto for about two weeks. He likely was a middle man working with a Mexican drug-trafficking group, Roti said. "It's not the biggest [drug seizure] we've ever had, but it's substantial," he said.

Gonzalez-Nieto is not a U.S. citizen, and police did not know how long he has been in the U.S.

Drug traffickers usually transport a load of drugs as large as the stash found in Gonzalez-Nieto's home in a semi-truck or a moving van, Roti said.

"They typically don't keep drugs in one place for a long period of time," Roti said. "It was getting ready to be moved out onto the street."

City pulls back on community agriculture ruling

Chicago Tribune

A city investigator visited an Andersonville home last week, on a tip that folks inside were dealers.

The merchandise? Organic carrots, cucumbers, green peppers and chives. Not to mention heirloom tomatoes.

The investigator from the Chicago Department of Business Affairs and Consumer Protection mistakenly believed the family was selling the produce from their front porch, as a neighbor had reported.

But the family explained they were just members of a CSA (community supported agriculture) group. Like thousands of Chicagoans, they buy shares in local farms during the winter in exchange for boxes of fresh produce in summer. Members pick up their weekly boxes—with no money exchanged—from specific homes, churches, markets and even the Aon building.

But the investigator had never heard of this concept and slapped the North Side family with a "cease and desist" order.

The family appealed to the office of their alderman, Gene Schuler (47th), whose aides e-mailed Business Affairs. The department insisted that "food items are being sold" requiring a "retail food license" and that it's illegal to "warehouse" goods in a home.

On Friday afternoon, things still were looking grim for the dozens of local families who host CSA drop-offs and the thousands who pick up from them. But cooler cucumbers prevailed and the department issued this statement:

"Our department responded to a complaint received through 311 that a residence was selling groceries from their front porch. On the 28th, an investigator issued a Cease and Desist order for operating without a wholesale food establishment license. Upon further investigation and in speaking with the supplier we have decided to remove the Cease and Desist order immediately."

2 killed at Stony Island Park party

Two men were killed—one of them an expectant father—and two others wounded early Sunday in a drive-by shooting in Stony Island Park, according to police and a family member of one of the deceased.

One person was being questioned in connection with the shooting, but no charges were filed by late Sunday.

About 2:40 a.m., four men were near a party at East 84th Street and South Euclid Avenue when they were shot from a passing vehicle.

Michael Chatman, 22, of the 8000 block of South Evans Avenue, was hit and later pronounced dead, according to the Cook County medical examiner's office. A second 22-year-old, Reginald Riley, of the 7600 block of South King Drive, was shot multiple times and pronounced dead at Northwestern Memorial Hospital. TRIBUNE

IN OTHER CPD NEWS

- Police continue to ask the public for help to solve the murder of Chicago police Officer Michael Bailey. He was shot July 18 in front of his Park Manor home. Nearly $130,000 in reward money is available.
- Police said Sunday they are looking for a suspect 18 to 22 years old in connection with the slaying of Robert Freeman Jr., 13. He was shot more than a dozen times last week in the 11500 block of South Perry Avenue in West Pullman. Police Deputy Superintendent Steve Peterson would not say what the relationship is between the suspect and Robert. The boy's family has said they think the slaying was a case of mistaken identity, but Peterson said police don't yet know the motive.

Panel slams BP cleanup, use of chemical dispersants

6 WASHINGTON New documents released by a congressional subcommittee indicate that Coast Guard officials allowed BP to use excessive amounts of chemical dispersants in the Gulf of Mexico.

BP used the chemicals to break up oil after the April 20 Deepwater Horizon rig explosion sent millions of gallons of crude gushing into the Gulf.

Despite a federal directive restricting their use, the Coast Guard routinely granted exemptions, said Rep. Edward Markey (D-Mass.), chairman of the House Energy and Environment Subcommittee.

In May, the Environmental Protection Agency, along with the Coast Guard, ordered the oil giant to stop surface application of the chemicals during the oil spill except in rare occasions, according to a House subcommittee on energy and environment. In rare cases, exemptions had to be requested, documents show.

"BP carpet bombed the ocean with these chemicals, and the Coast Guard allowed them to do it," Markey said in a statement Saturday. "After we discovered how toxic these chemicals really are, they had no business being spread across the Gulf in this manner."

The exemptions granted "were in no way rare," Markey said in a letter to retired Adm. Thad Allen, the former commandant of the Coast Guard who is now overseeing the federal response to the oil spill.

The Coast Guard approved more than 74 exemptions in 48 days, Markey said. In one instance, Coast Guard officials allowed the oil giant to use a larger volume of dispersants than it had applied for, he said.

UAE to limit BlackBerry use

1 The United Arab Emirates will suspend some BlackBerry services starting Oct. 11, officials said Sunday. Telecom officials will suspend BlackBerry services providing e-mail, Web browsing, instant messaging and social networking.

U.S-Iraq data conflicts

2 The U.S. military on Sunday disputed Iraqi figures that indicated July was the deadliest month for civilians there since May 2008, saying the actual numbers are less than half what Iraq's government has reported.

Everglades on danger list

3 Florida's Everglades National Park and rain forests in Madagascar have been added to a list of world heritage sites in danger. The World Heritage Committee of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization announced the decision Friday in Brasilia, Brazil.

Warning alerts astronauts to space station problem

Warning alarms awakened crew members on the International Space Station after problems were detected in one of its ammonia-fed cooling loops, NASA said Sunday. The crew is not in danger but will troubleshoot the problem.

Gates: WikiLeaks morally responsible

4 WikiLeaks is at least morally guilty over the release of classified U.S. documents on the Afghan war, Defense Secretary Robert Gates said Sunday, as investigators broadened their probe of the leak.

Falling ice kills child

5 An 11-year-old girl was killed Saturday and her mother injured when a chunk of ice struck them near the Big Four ice caves in Mount Baker-Snoqualmie National Forest in Washington state, authorities said.

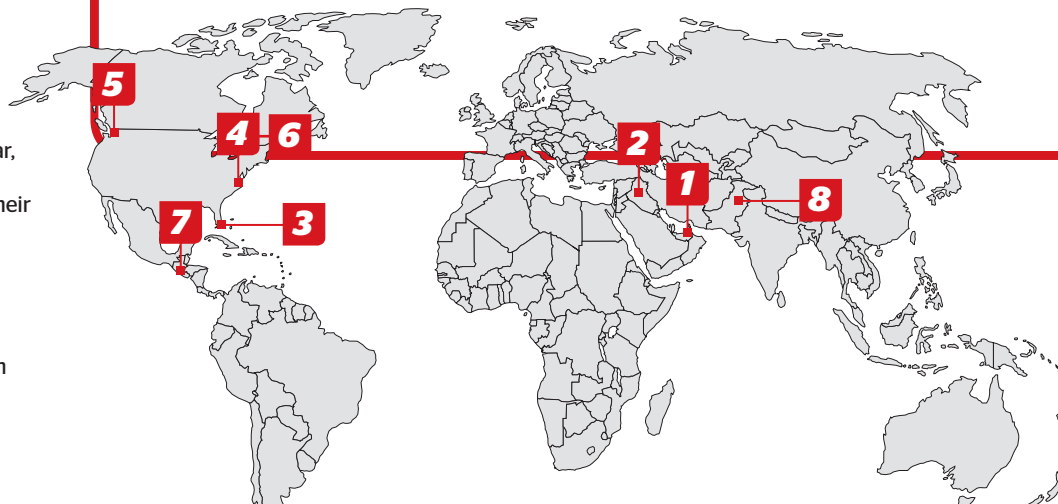

Death toll on the rise after floods

8 ISLAMABAD, Pakistan Devastating floods in Pakistan have killed more 1,100 people, Pakistani government officials told CNN on Sunday.

Another 30,000 people were stuck on their rooftops and in higher areas as they tried to escape rushing floodwaters, a United Nations official said Sunday.

"We've got the government sending boats and helicopters to try to reach people and bring them to safety at the same time as trying to deliver emergency relief," said Nicki Bennett, a senior humanitarian affairs officer for the U.N.

Damaged roads and bridges have made rescuing residents difficult, she said, noting that even a U.N. warehouse where the organization stores food, blankets and soap partially is underwater. "As we are trying to reach people, we have to battle with the ongoing access problems," she said.

THE DIGIT

42 years

That's how long a supply of unused, radioactive plutonium-beryllium was "forgotten" at a laboratory in Tbilisi, Georgia, the nation's capital. It was found in a "special container stored in wax and lead, which was quite safe and presented no danger for the environment," a government official said.

Wrigley Shore

For some reason, Cubs baseball reminds us of MTV's beach bums

RedEye

It's a train wreck, but you can't turn away.

Are we talking about "Jersey Shore" or Cubs baseball?

In a season of unspectacular play on the field and drama off it, the Cubs have captured our attention again—for better or worse. Be it Carlos Zambrano's antics, Sweet Lou Piniella's retirement or trade-deadline moves, we're there.

It reminds one of the constant drama surrounding the now-infamous MTV reality show to make stars out of nobodies. So, without further ado, here's how the Cubs and "Jersey Shore" are more alike than different.

We like to watch

JERSEY SHORE: Although you can find few people who admit they tune in, "Shore's" Season 2 premiere Thursday drew 5.3 million viewers.

CUBS: No matter how bad they are, the Cubs always find a way to mostly fill Wrigley and draw television viewers.

Blow by blow

JERSEY SHORE: In the first season, Ronnie and The Situation fight over roommate Sammi.

CUBS: Carlos Zambrano fights with, well, with whom doesn't he fight?

Liquid assets

JERSEY SHORE: Castmates spend their time drinking, often times a bit too much. Oh, who are we kidding? All the time.

CUBS: Wrigley Field's Bleacher Bums spend home games drinking, often times a bit too much.

Cop out

JERSEY SHORE: There's a very good chance someone will be led away in handcuffs. Oh, yes, thank you, Snooki.

CUBS: Just insert "overserved Cubs fan" for "Snooki" and we've covered all our bases.

Shirts and skins

JERSEY SHORE: The Situation loves to show off his abtacular body.

CUBS: There's always that one d-bag who has his shirt off, even in April.

Cash confusion

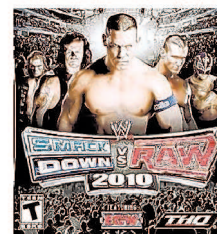

JERSEY SHORE: Cast members are overpriced at, some reports say, up to $30,000 per episode.

CUBS: Players are overpriced, considering the results they produce. Hello, 102 years without a World Series title.

Missing man

JERSEY SHORE: Angelina "Jolie" Pivarnick left the show because she refused to work at a T-shirt shop.

CUBS: Zambrano was sent to rehab because he couldn't keep his temper in check.

I only hope you can re-create that time Jewel guest-hosted "Monday Night Raw." What was that all about? Anyhow, this game is available for all platforms. Even PlayStation 2. People still use that?

WATCH 'Shaq Vs.'

The big man tries to outrace NASCAR driver Dale Earnhardt Jr. and outspell National Spelling Bee champ Kavya Shivashankar. How about trying to out-tweet Chad Ochocinco? Let's see that.

ATTEND

Cubs vs. Milwaukee

1:20 p.m. Wednesday

Cubs tickets are much easier to come by nowadays, and there's not a much better way to spend time than at a day baseball game in Chicago. Do it before summer is gone. Just don't expect to see the "W" flag flying afterward.

The Sky are in the hunt for the team's first trip to the playoffs. They'll need to win this one if they want to keep those dreams alive.

1 What has been the surprise of Bears training camp so far?	We don't have a new Lovie catchphrase to replace "we get off the bus running" yet.	That my faith in Mike Martz's offensive scheme has lasted one whole answer.	That Bears fans haven't already given up on the team.	That Mike "Mad Scientist" Martz hasn't blown up his lab yet.	Lovie Smith resigns to become new judge on "American Idol." Hey, a guy can dream.
2 What can Bears wide receivers learn from former St. Louis receiver Isaac Bruce?	How to ruin my fantasy football season. I won't fall for it again, Brucie.	He can teach them the routes their QB will have no time/protection to deliver them the ball on.	How to be awesome for years on turf, make the Super Bowl and lose to the Patriots.	Wear flame retardant underwear (see No. 1).	With Mike Tice on the staff, shouldn't Isaac Washington ("Love Boat" bartender) be brought to camp?
3 How did the White Sox do at the trade deadline?	Just fine. They didn't really need to do anything. They're doing all right the way they are, thank you.	Sounds like they got stuck holding what the gentlemen of "Jersey Shore" would call The Grenade.	Oh you know, just grabbed a guy who THREW A NO-HITTER this year, NBD.	They learned there's no such thing as a "Dunn Deal."	Edwin Jackson? They got nothing Dunn.
4 What did we learn at the Blackhawks convention?	We still love the Hawks, at least the three we still recognize.	That the Stanley Cup is better for quarters than flip cup.	Insert "knucklepuck/keg stand/the entire team is gone" joke here.	Patrick Kane can't dance, even when he's sober.	Fake Q 'staches are less geeky than fake Spock ears.
5 The Hawks aren't making money. How could they solve that?	Sell Duncan Keith's missing teeth on eBay.	Submit highlights from the '04-'05 season to "America's Funniest Home Videos" and pray for a winner.	Win the Stan ... um, "Chelsea Dagger" karaoke night?	Open a kissing booth for the Stanley Cup.	All bartenders donate 20 cents for every beer Kaner has consumed in the offseason. Everyone wins.

Monday is D-Day for Niemi, Hawks

Another chapter of the Antti Niemi saga will be written Monday as general manager Stan Bowman makes his decision on what to do with the Blackhawks' starting goaltender.

After Niemi was awarded $2.75 million for next season by an arbitrator Saturday, Bowman had 48 hours to determine whether he would keep the netminder at that salary or let him walk as an unrestricted free agent and go after a veteran goalie such as Marty Turco on the free-agent market.

Monday's decision may not be the end of the story though as Bowman, who has been forced to trade six players from the Stanley Cup champions this offseason because of salary-cap constraints, could accept the award and then trade Niemi.

"There are always options in every decision," Bowman said Sunday during a panel discussion at the 2010 Blackhawks Convention at the Hilton Chicago. "You have to weigh what it would take, what it would do to your team in terms of flexibility-wise if you decide to keep him [or] if maybe you have to move somebody else along. There's no one right way to do it. But we're going to all think about it, and we'll come up with the right decision.

"I've tried to say this all along. You know, one guy does not make a team here. We've got a lot of great players and we're going to be ready come October to defend the Cup and we're going to work on making sure we get it right."

A question from a fan during the discussion also brought minor-league goalie Corey Crawford into the goaltending equation.

Crawford, who has spent the bulk of his past five seasons in the minors, has played eight career games with the Hawks and has a 1-3 record and .915 save percentage.

"[Crawford's] spent a number of years developing in our system and I think the time is now for him to get an opportunity to show us what he can do," general manager Stan Bowman said. "He's certainly had a chance to learn his craft in the minor leagues. He's carried the load down there year after year. I think it's time for him. That's one of the things we're looking forward to, is you have to give players an opportunity."

WHITE SOX 4, OAKLAND 1

With their 12-game home winning streak now history, the White Sox started a new one before they embarked on a road trip. Gavin Floyd beat the A's 4-1 with help from Matt Thornton, J.J. Putz and Bobby Jenks.

» Stuart Appleby reached golf's magic number Sunday, shooting a 59 at the Greenbrier Classic in White Sulphur Springs, W.Va. Appleby becomes the fifth PGA Tour player to reach the milestone.

» Kerry Wood made his first appearance for New York in relief of CC Sabathia on Sunday. The right-hander pitched one inning, allowing one hit, two walks and three strikeouts.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Mercury in your sign is increasing your confidence. You'll find it easy to attract attention from flirtatious friends and acquaintances. The question is: What are you going to do about it? Is it time to stir up a little trouble or do you want to play it safe?

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Your sex drive is out of control, thanks to the full moon. You could end up intimidating your lover and might be tempted to call up a former flame just for a quick hookup, since you have so much extra energy. Be cautious, though. Don't do something you'll later regret.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Venus is turning you into a poet. You're thinking about someone hot, wondering if you can woo him or her with your creative talents. You could decide to write a love poem or a letter that confesses your deepest, darkest desires.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You're questioning your lover's attentions. The moon is making you paranoid. Maybe your girlfriend is a closet Republican. Perhaps your boyfriend is a secret polygamist with three wives hidden away in Utah. Here's the good news: You're probably wrong.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Saturn is putting you in a practical mood. If your girlfriend requires expensive gifts or your boyfriend is high maintenance, you might be considering an exit strategy. Make sure your relationship contract has an escape clause.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

If you've been holding back, you need to let it all hang out. The full moon in your sign has you bursting with emotions. Let your former flame know how you really feel about your breakup. Tell your current honey what you truly desire.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You might want to take a break from romantic pursuits. Saturn has you feeling fatigued and traumatized. Get together with friends who love you unconditionally. Hike in the mountains, go for a long bike ride or take a solo vacation.

Aries March 21-April 19

Sometimes your entire world revolves around your romantic partner. This is one of those times. The sun is increasing your need to lose yourself in your sweetheart and spend every waking hour obsessing about love. Aren't you cute?

Taurus April 20-May 20

Even if you're in a happy relationship, you're going through a restless period. You're wondering if the grass might be greener someplace else. Mercury is inspiring you to engage in a heated e-mail flirtation or virtual hookup with someone at a dating site.

Gemini May 21-June 21

A funky lunar eclipse has you flying blind, romantically speaking. You can't tell if your honey is the love of your life or your worst enemy. There can be a fine line between love and hate, and eclipses increase the intensity factor. Tread gently.

Cancer June 22-July 22

You just want to cuddle and caress as the moon turns you into a snuggle monster. You'll demand that your lover spend all of his or her time worshipping you and giving you physical attention. Fortunately, your partner will be happy to oblige.

GOT A TIP?

Do you have a hot tip on a celebrity sighting in Chicago? E-mail Luis or tweet him @luisarroyave.

The first thing celebrities see when they walk through the side door at Enclave are framed photos of stars who have visited the River North club. The pictures range from A-listers—the Black Eyed Peas, Jamie Foxx, Tony Romo—to another list that includes Pauly Shore.

Still, Enclave, which is celebrating its five-year anniversary this month, treats all its celebrity guests as though they're A-list, even if it has been ages since "Encino Man" came out.

Celebrity appearances have helped the club stay relevant in an industry where what's new tends to be what's popular. That's why Enclave, run by Cuvee owners Downtown Entertainment, plans to keep the paid appearances coming.

During this month's anniversary celebration, the Black Eyed Peas will appear at Enclave on Aug. 13 for the fifth time. Brody Jenner ("The Hills") and Kevin Dillon ("Entourage") tentatively are scheduled to make appearances Aug. 14 and Aug. 28, respectively.

"People come out of the woodwork for celebs," said Downtown Entertainment talent booker Matt Deichl. "When Paris Hilton tweeted about heading to Enclave, reservations for that day went way up."

Hilton spent much of the night in her VIP section, as did Ronaldinho when he visited in May (Deichl said the soccer star racked up one of the most impressive bills he can remember but didn't say how much). Other celebs have been known to get behind the bar—including Dillon and Audrina Patridge ("The Hills")—or in the case of Steve-O ("Jackass"), on the bar.

And then there are those who interact with the crowd by hitting the DJ booth or performing onstage.

Stefani Germanotta wasn't very well known when she performed at Enclave in June 2008. The young New York singer had yet to release her debut album and was performing for free to get her name out there. Following her set, Germanotta waited patiently in the kitchen for 15 minutes so she could catch Deichl and thank him. They took a picture together, and now that photo of a 22-year-old Germanotta, better known as Lady Gaga, hangs on the wall.

Fashion romance

The list could have gone to 50. VH1 has counted down the 10 craziest Lady Gaga fashion moments. No. 10 was the lobster headpiece she wore to dinner, ya know, the way everyone does. The red latex gown she wore to perform for Queen Elizabeth II came in at No. 6. At No. 3 was the ensemble made from what looked like the pelts of Kermit the frog and his family. The cone bra that shot out sparks was No. 1.

Live from New York

"Saturday Night Live" will meet "30 Rock" when the sitcom airs its first live episode Oct. 14, NBC has announced. The cast will perform the show twice to give the West Coast folks the joy of live as well.

Friends...

Former "Friends" stars and off-screen pals Jennifer Aniston and Courteney Cox might be bringing their friendship back onscreen. Aniston is in talks to guest star on Cox's ABC sitcom, "Cougar Town," ew.com reports. Aniston previously guest-starred on Cox's FX drama "Dirt."

Perry

... and a not-so-friendly exchange

Matthew Perry had a rather awkward exchange with a TV critic as he promoted his ABC comedy, "Mr. Sunshine," on Sunday. Eonline.

com reports that the newspaper critic said, "All the 'Friends' are sort of cooking along pretty well these days except, it seems, for David [Schwimmer]." To which, Perry replied, "If he were here, would you say, 'Except for Matthew?'" Then the critic asked if Perry ever talks to Schwimmer about his goals. Perry said: "I have not seen David for a while, but I would assume he's doing exactly what he wants to be doing. He loves directing and he loves the theater, so he's probably doing a bunch of that lame stuff." Schwimmer is a co-founder of Chicago's excellent Lookingglass Theatre and has directed productions there.

$27.5 million

That's the amount "Inception" made at the box office, keeping it at No. 1 for a third straight weekend.
